Premier Tells Maccagno Priority On Natural Gas Is Community's

Premier Manning said here in the Legislature that Alberta communities get first priority on natural gas regardless of contracts that may exist between producers and exports.

He was replying to Michael Maccagno (L—Lac la Biche) who expressed concern over future supplies of gas for his northern Alberta town.

Mr. Maccagno said the town secretary had received a letter from Blake S. Sage of Sage Oil Company Limited, operator of gas wells in the Lac la Biche area.

Mr. Sage said in the letter the company is negotiating to export Lac la Biche area gas by pipeline to Edmonton. The pipeline would serve a number of towns south of Lac la Biche.

Mr. Sage suggested Lac la Biche should do something about assuring that future supplies of gas are available because "if export goes your town's future gas will also go."

Mr. Manning said contracts to sell gas for export have no particular significance until export permits are granted. He said that in addition the Alberta Oil and Gas Conservation Board has the power to direct that gas from a certain field or well will be sold to a certain person, company or town.

Fur Farmers View Choice Mink Pelts

LAC LA BICHE — A fur farmers' meeting was held in the banquet room of the York Hotel, Feb. 17, with a majority of the Lac la Biche and Plamondon mink ranchers in attendance.

Guest speakers for the evening were Bob Gillies, John Caine and Ken Montgomery, all of Edmonton.

A splendid film was shown on the life of a mink from the time it is born until it is made up into a luxurious fur coat. This film was greatly enjoyed by the farmers as it was helpful and instructive to those who breed mink.

There was also on display a large number of ready tanned mink pelts. These pelts are the property of the Canadian Fur Breeders and are being shown in many points, in both North and South America.

A light lunch was served at the conclusion of the meeting.

Fur farmers will find these meetings entertaining, educational and beneficial to their business.

Cucumbers Can Grow Successfully In North

Not only can cucumbers be grown successfully in relatively northern areas, but, according to C. Walkof of the Morden Experimental Farm, there is quite a wide selection of varieties available with varying dates of maturity.

Their combined use, means a steady flow of cucumbers ripening progressively over the harvest season.

An excellent succession of cucumbers was grown at Kenville, Man., one of the most northerly farming districts in the province, by transplanting plants of four varieties at a similar time in late May.

Varieties used: Morden Early; Early Siberian; Green Thumb; and Marketer.

Morden Early is one of the earliest cucumbers available, maturing six days earlier than Early Siberian. Developed as an early, slicing variety, it is useful for home-made dill pickles and also as an early producer in districts where standard varieties are grown.

Early Siberian, long popular as an early cucumber, conveniently follows Morden Early in maturity in short-season districts, and is useful for slicing and pickling.

Green Thumb matures about five days later than Early Siberian and provides deep green fruit that makes attractive looking pickles.

Marketer is a mid to late season cucumber, especially useful for slicing. It provides excellent fruits until frosts occur.

Seed of these varieties is available from commercial sources.

County Business Done In One Day Is "Rare Occasion"

The council of the county of Athabasca met on Wednesday, Feb. 10 and was one of the rare meetings since the county was formed when county business was concluded in one day.

The day previous to the meeting, the council set as a committee to approve the applications on the Federal-Provincial Emergency Unthreshed Grain Assistance Policy. Roughly one hundred & eighty applications were received and considered by the committee, and approximately one hundred and seventy were approved. The others will be investigated.

The Recreational Grant from the Provincial Government was left until the hamlets let the county know what each one wants.

All applications for winter work have been approved by the federal and provincial governments.

A resolution passed at the Edmonton Union of Municipal Districts in January was read to council. This dealt with assistance to Grain Producers: resolved that the government pay those not qualifying under the Federal-Provincial Emergency Unthreshed Grain Assistance Policy receive a sum at least equal to the sum paid in 1958 (a maximum of $200 at the rate of $1.00 per acre).

The County has been granted $6,549 for development of local parks, camping and recreational facilities in the county. A committee of three was set up to investigate the possibility of finding the most suitable picnic, recreational or camping sites in the county for further development.

A letter was received from C. E. Hitz thanking the county for the gift received.

The council approved a subdivision of lake lot 22-66-24 as recommended by the Advisory Town Planning Board.

F. S. Goddard, superintendent of special projects for the Department of Agriculture, on the invitation of council, briefly explained the organization and operation of seed cleaning plants in the Province of Alberta.

For a plant to be self-supporting, he said, there should be 200,000 acres annually seeded within a radius of 20 to 30 miles. This is cereal grain only, not forage seed. An acreage report showed the area is considerably under the minimum.

MUST FORM CO-OP

Before the seed cleaning plant could be considered the farmers interested must form a local co-op, register and sell shares at $50 each. There should be at least 340 shares sold, with a minimum of 275 bonafide farmers.

An agreement is then made between the association and the county and between the county and the government, and the erection of the plant proceeds. Three to three and one-half cents per bushel should cover the costs of operating the plants, but he suggested that for the first two or three years the charge should be six cents per bushel.

A number of routine affairs was dealt with: road cancellations, grazing leases log cutting permits, crop share leases, etc.

Secretary-Treasurer Walter Leskiw called the attention of the meeting to the fact that the penalty on 1959 taxes and arrears goes into effect on March 1, 1960, and urged the councillors pass the word on. Payment before that date would avoid penalty, he said.

Accounts were approved.

The School Committee met on Thursday, the 11th. The question was raised as to how much notice school committee members should have when the School Committee was planning on meeting. After some discussion it was left for the present.

A request for secretarial assistance for a principal was discussed and twenty-one hours a week were authorized at the rate of $1.25 per hour.

A report on the meeting in the Prairie area, between the two community clubs, was made. It was indicated that a third club was in the process of registration and more would be heard shortly.

A request has been made for ministerial approval of the formation of Centralized Boards.

A report was made by the delegate on the Salary Seminar held in Edmonton.

SET MEETING DATE

After some talk it was decided to hold an annual school meeting at Smith as those people were not in the County and would not be attending the ratepayers' meeting in Athabasca on the 20th. It was finally decided to hold it Feb. 29, at 7:30 in the school.

After noon, the consideration of accounts took the better part of an hour.

A report was read from the Department of Education Maintenance inspectors who recently were in some of the schools.

The annual convention of A.S.T.A. Zone 2 will be held March 2 and 3 in the Corona Hotel. Members Dan Lechky, Bob Remley, Ben F. Shaw were elected as delegates.

A letter from a mother in regard to boarding allowance for her two sons in order they might study French and receive religious instruction was left till after the Committee meets with the Committee from the Lac la Biche division, which will take place in March. At the present time the policy of the County does not allow boarding allowance.

A request from the Colinton Skating Club for a lot next to the curling rink was tabled till it could be investigated further.

A lengthy report was made on the Laggard Student Policy. Some of the schools have reached phase two of the operation of the policy, which is a letter from the School Committee to the parents, stating the conditions under which the child may remain in school. All students must be up before the committee before they may be suspended.

NO SUSPENSION

So far, no students have been suspended under the policy, and no

Federation Report Presented At Home & School Association Meet

HYLO — The regular meeting of the Hylo Home and School Association was held in the Hylo School on Thursday, Feb. 18, with an average attendance.

A report from the Alberta Home and School Federation was read and it stated that the demand on HSA in Alberta is becoming greater as it progresses toward a responsible position in education. Associations, too, are demanding services beyond the present financial ability to perform. There is a tremendous opportunity to accomplish many things if the public is willing to pay for them.

Membership fees pay for these things and if improvements are to be made in the way of office space, more equipment, enlarged facilities, increased office staff and better and more valuable service to the members, it is necessary that the fees be raised.

This whole problem of financing, therefore, must be given serious study. If residents are proud of what Home and School is doing and positive of the future this can be one of the best investments in the future of the province for the next generation.

The library committee informed the members that the claim for new books had been sent in.

The Alberta Home and School News was distributed to members.

A letter from S. Powers, district agriculturist, informed the members that started trees are available from the department of agriculture.

After a discussion on the improvement of the school grounds it was decided to order the started trees from the department.

A fee of 50 cents per person will be charged for the rest of the skating season. Seasonal tickets are available from William Sachko. Occasional skaters, who have no seasonal ticket, will be charged 25 cents.

A committee was formed to study the Royal Cameron Commission on Education and reports are to be given at the next meeting. The topic to be studied is the "Centralization of Schools." Volunteers for this committee were Mrs. O. Meardi, William Sachko, H. Stratichuk, Mr. and Mrs. B. Lozinski, Mrs. M. Grandish, Mrs. C. McEachern, Mrs. A. Moshuk and Mrs. N. Zalewsky. Mrs. M. Grandish was chosen as chairman of the committee.

A film, "The Threshold" was then shown which portrayed the adaptation of an Austrian family in Canada. Immigrants face a number of problems besides language, and adults usually have a more difficult time to adapt themselves than the children. The community can help them by personal interviews and inviting them to join local clubs.

A discussion was held after the film was shown, followed by the serving of cinnamon buns and coffee.

THE Homemaker

By BERTHA M. McCUTCHEON

Consumers have had a big bargain in food available for weeks now and it looks as if the bargain, named eggs, is going to be with us for a while yet. Taking full advantage of this low priced, high quality food helps to take some of the strain off the food budget.

B. McCutcheon

Three dozen Grade A large eggs weigh four and a half lbs. At present prices they are less than 25c a pound. This is a real food bargain as one pound, which equals a minimum of 8 eggs, will serve three to four people as a main dish for lunch or dinner.

Use eggs to advantage to extend small quantities of foods. For example the Poultry Products Institute points out that one cup of ground cooked meat, poultry or fish will make four to six servings when eggs are added as in a soufflé, or unsweetened baked custards. Our grandmothers served the latter under the name of timbalas.

A small quantity of cubed poultry or flaked fish combined with several chopped or quartered hard-cooked eggs in a well-seasoned cream, mushroom, tomato or curry sauce can turn out to be company fare when served on light-as-a-feather tea biscuits or tender little pastry shells. However they are used, eggs add flavor, nutrition, economy to our meals.

With eggs selling at bargain prices, now is the time to make some of those delicious old-fashioned desserts, cakes or cookies. Short cuts in cooking are a boon to busy homemakers but most women admit they get a tremendous satisfaction from making a cake, cookies or dessert from scratch rather than opening a package. So get out the cookbook and make some of those old family favorites such as angel cake, chiffon, sponge or butter cake.

Dorothy Batcheller, the home economist of the Poultry Products Institute prepared a booklet called Cooking Canada's Eggs and she said she was astounded when a homemaker pointed out to her that there were suggestions or recipes in the 24 page booklet for preparing eggs in literally a hundred ways. So if meat seems expensive eggs can help to ease the strain on the food budget. Of course you don't have to live alone or be a twosome to enjoy economical egg dishes. So if you would like some ideas for using eggs just send for a free copy of Cooking Canada's Eggs. Mail your name and address to Poultry Products Institute of Canada, Box 2, Postal Station "K", Toronto 12, Ontario and ask for Cooking Canada's Eggs.

Quick Gelatine Sponge, with or without additions of diced or sliced fruit, can be prepared with a minimum of effort by the most inexperienced cook and yet it is a delicious dessert.

Prepare jelly powders of any desired flavor according to package directions, suggest the Poultry Products Institute, then chill until thick and syrupy. Beat with hand or electric beater until fluffy, then add an egg white and continue beating until mixture has increased in bulk and holds in peaks.

If desired arrange drained diced or sliced sweetened fresh, thawed frozen or canned fruit in bottom of an oiled mould. Pour gelatine sponge into mould and chill until firm. Serve turned out or right from the dish with chilled custard sauce made with left-over egg yolk plus one whole egg.

Astounding...and True

SHY, DEMURE EVE WHITE described to the doctor the agonizing headaches and blackouts from which she suffered. Her husband, Ralph, said she showed peculiar changes of mood and he sometimes lost his temper with her.—Illustration from the 20th Century-Fox motion picture "The Three Faces of Eve."

The Three Faces Of Eve

By CORBETT H. THIGPEN, M.D., and HERVEY M. CLECKLEY, M.D.

This is the first of 18 articles telling the true story of one of the most remarkable cases in all medical history. It is a case of multiple personality—three entirely different women in one body. The story is told by the two doctors who treated the case and helped the young housewife find her true self. The patient's name has been changed in the story.

CHAPTER ONE

Eve White did not at first appear to be an unusual or a particularly interesting patient.

This neat, colorless young woman was, she said quietly, 25 years of age. In a level, slightly monotonous voice she described the severe headache from which she had suffered for several months and for which she had been unable to obtain relief. Unlike some patients to whom the elastic term neurotic is applied, she did not say that the pain was "unbearable", or that it was "as if an axe were splitting her skull".

This Was . . .

EVE WHITE

SHY and demure, a religious young housewife whose main interest in life was her small daughter.

Demure and poised, she sat with her feet close together, speaking clearly but in soft, low tones. Her dark hair and pale blue eyes were distinctly pretty, though she seemed too retiring and inert to utilize, or even to be very clearly aware of, her good features and her potential attractiveness.

Her local physician sent her approximately 100 miles away for psychiatric consultation. Ordinary physical examinations, X-ray and laboratory studies, had disclosed no cause of the headaches.

She spoke of serious problems in her life and without evasion discussed a situation that might cause distress and frustration for any person of normal feelings.

Six years ago she married a young man. He was a faithful member of the Catholic Church. As a Baptist, she had had misgivings about the oath she was required to take, promising that her children would be carefully brought up as Catholics. Despite these misgivings she had intended to carry out the solemn agreement.

She admitted that she could not bring herself to send her little girl, Bonnie, 3 years old, to her husband's church. She had stubbornly refused to have her child baptized in the Catholic Church. Her mother and father took an active part in the contention between husband and wife, repeatedly urging her not to give in.

Mrs. White did not spontaneously heap blame upon her husband or hold him alone responsible for the sorrows and difficulties of their marriage. In fact, she took pains to defend him.

She reluctantly gave some details of the quarreling that had become habitual. Her husband, she said, had seldom been able to show affection or even friendliness toward her during the last few months. Often he seemed to her irritabe or sarcastic.

DEEPLY HURT

Sometimes she could not tell what had offended him and she found herself puzzled about the nature of his complaints. She finally admitted that on one occasion, quite unlike himself, he had struck her. Though it was apparently only a light slap administered in exasperation, her feelings had been deeply hurt.

Surely it must be an unusual man who would lose his temper with this unprovocative woman. What were the grounds for his anger?

"He must have his reasons," she granted thoughtfully. "I am not quite sure what it is I do that aggravates him so." She hesitated, then sadly admitted, "I've never seemed to make him happy."

He had apparently lost most of the sexual interest he had once felt for her. Never, she confessed with regret, had she been able to reach any sort of exciting fulfillment in the marriage relations. Since the general marital status had become so unpleasant, she found physical contact with her husband distasteful.

SAW NO HOPE

It was plain that Mrs. White saw no hope of happiness with her husband. It was equally plain that she did not want a divorce.

This Was . . .

EVE BLACK

SAUCY and flirtatious, a party girl who liked her gin and thought it fun to pick up strange men.

Throughout the long first interview Mrs. White did not raise her voice—nor did she shed a tear. The cadence of her speech varied little. Superficially she seemed at times a dull, colorless person, too bound by propriety and inhibition to manifest herself warmly or adequately. Such an impression was misleading, the examiner soon decided. Behind this restrained expression, indication of deeply felt grief, despair and bewilderment, and an almost desperate love for little Bonnie became ever more apparent.

Were the emotional conflicts and stresses described by Mrs. White responsible for the attacks of severe headache which had brought her to her local doctor? If so, what could be done to give her relief?

In referring to her headaches the patient sometimes spoke of them as "blinding." It was not easy to tell precisely what she meant by this term. Apparently she did not literally or totally lose her sight, but suffered some of the many visual disturbances often reported in migraine.

HAD BLACKOUTS

She also spoke of blackouts which followed the headaches. Though she never seemed deliberately evasive, it was difficult for the examiner to get a clear conception of what occurred during these spells. At times Mrs. White referred to them in such a way as to suggest that she simply fainted; and at time the examiner felt she might be describing more complicated periods of amnesia.

Neurologic examination revealed no indication of brain tumor or of any other organic disease that might cause periods of unconsciousness. There was no history of convulsive disorder.

So this is how the patient, Eve White, appeared in her first psychiatric interview. Her clinical symptoms were not unusual. Her personal problems were complicated and serious, but by no means extraordinary.

This Was . . .

JANE

PLEASANT, thoughtful and quietly capable, a mature woman who seemed ready to meet life.

There was nothing that led the examiner to suspect that fascinating and bewildering prospects lay ahead, that eventually her case would be presented as something almost unique at a meeting of the American Psychiatric Association.

SHOWED IMPROVEMENT

Over a period of several weeks during which she returned for a few more interviews, Eve White made gratifying improvement. She still had occasional headaches but they were less severe. She no longer reported blackout spells.

From her husband, Ralph White who accompanied her on one of these visits, the therapist obtained additional information. This man confirmed in general the history as given by the patient. He admitted that at times she showed peculiar changes of mood and that he had occasionally lost his temper with her for a moment. He regarded her, nevertheless, as a patient industrious wife, a devoted mother.

"It's hard to believe, doctor, that such a sweet, steady woman could ever aggravate anybody. Maybe she is too good. Maybe that is why I lose my temper once in a while. You get accustomed to what she's like and you don't know what to make of . . . of anything different . . . when it comes."

When asked to elaborate, Ralph White spoke of rare occasions when Eve had showed something less than her customary forbearance and calm.

"It must be a sort of little erratic streak that comes out just every now and then," he suggested. He spoke also of occasional forgetfulness that had caused misunderstandings between them.

TENSE AND REJECTED

Several weeks passed without news from Mrs. White. Then a discouraging letter from the husband was received. It annouced the reture of severe headaches and requested an early appointment.

Seated in the office Eve White again seemed very tense and dejected. The headaches had recently kept her miserable much of the time. She was in considerable pain. She seemed concerned with a dream which she told the therapist had recurred several times.

"I am in a tremendous room," she said. "Toward the center of this room is a pool of stagnant green water. On the edge of the pool stand my husband and my uncle. I am in the water with Bonnie. I am trying to get her out for we both seem to be drowning, but I must not take her out where she will be near my husband or my uncle. Despite all I can do to the contrary, I put her directly into my husband's hands. Then my uncle, who I love dearly, tries to push my head under the slimy water. I can remember nothing more."

She seemed unable to relate this dream or any of its details to the events of her life. The therapist suggested that she undergo hypnosis. She agreed and hypnosis was induced. The patient was in this state when asked to repeat the dream and told that on awakening she would endeavor to determine what it might reflect of her situation in actual life.

HER EXPLANATION

Awake, she stated without hesitation that the room seemed to represent her existence, the stagnant pool her husband's religious affiliation. In the dream, as in reality, she was trying to escape the influence of his church and trying especially to prevent her child from becoming a part of it.

The dream showed her husband standing aside, refusing to help her in this struggle. The uncle who stood with him, unlike her parents and other relatives, had encouraged her to fulfill her promise and have her daughter raised a Catholic.

Though this interpretation of the dream revealed nothing she did not already know quite clearly and consciously, discussing it seemed to help her bring out some of the emotion connected with these problems which during previous interviews she had carefully restrained. The headache, to her surprise, suddenly ceased. She left the office in much improved spirits, more nearly relaxed and cheerful than the therapist had yet seen her.

Next week — The doctors are astounded as they learn the reason for Eve White's headaches. (From the book The Three Faces of Eve, copyright 1957 by Corbett H. Thigpen and Hervey M. Cleckley, and published by McGraw-Hill Book Co., Inc.) Distributed by The Register and Tribune Syndicate.

Mike Zalewsky remains a trustee for another two years for the Hylo Trapeze school district.

A number of business items were discussed and these matters will be dealt with at the earliest opportunity.
